WHERE WE ARE

INDONESIA

Archipelago of amazement is definitely not an overstatement. Indonesia is the celestial haven for your mind to wonder and your soul to wander. An archipelago comprises of more than 17,000 islands, hundreds of ethnic groups speaking many different languages, and the home of thousands diverse attractions, each with its own unique values. Indonesia will most likely satisfy your inner desire for adventure, leisure or even spiritual experience. What you're about to see might be beyond your wildest dreams.

SULAWESI

Formerly known as Celebes, Sulawesi is an island part of four Greater Sunda Islands, situated between Borneo and Maluku Islands. This enormous and charismatic island has so much to offer. Meet the people from the highlands, Torajans who live with their cultures that have been independently evolve through the dramatic geography and topography, down to sea level of Wakatobi's white and sandy beaches and Togian Islands occupied by fringe coral reefs and variety of fish; and the Bugis clan who are mainly inhabiting Sulawesi's coastal regions and well known as Indonesia's most famous seafarers. Further going down to the interior side, Sulawesi is shaded by impenetrable mountains and jungles filled with wildlife.

HIGHLANDS WISDOM

THE MOST EFFECTIVE ART OF SURVIVAL IS HARMONY

The arable land of Toraja is very limited due to its rocky terrain. It is isolated by natural barrier, making it hard to trade with outsiders. On this condition, ancient people in Toraja must have relied on very limited resources they had.

Traditional House at Palawa

This living condition turns Toraja into a self-fulfilling ecosystem. And with limited options at hand, Toraja ancestors chose the oldest and most compelling art of survival: harmony.

Torajans believe there's a tie (lolo) that attaches human, animals and plants in one system. To survive, human must care for animals and plants. If one of the three is harmed, all of them will suffer the consequences. This philosophy is called Tallu Lolona.

Tallu Lolona is a teaching of Aluk Todolo, an ancestral religion dating back to Torajan mythical past. This ancient faith teaches Torajans to respect their parents, elders, ancestors, and the balance of life in general.

This philosophy lives on, even when modernization makes Toraja no longer dependent on harmony to survive. Toraja is still and will strive for the balance between human, animals and plants. The prized water buffalo, for example, is often massaged, hand-fed, bathed and let loose in the field to relax. The people are very gentle in nature, not only towards the animals, but to each human being venturing into their land. Pilfer or theft is uncommon, even for foreigners visiting. The plants are nourished not only by viable sources of nutrients, but with heart as well as part of the circle of life that adjoins the land. As the teaching representing the ancestral spirits themselves, Tallu Lolona is the ultimate bond that binds all living entities in this mythical highland. It is the solemn sentinel that watches over in silence, existing through the veins of every breathing organism, spreading through the people themselves.

TONGKONAN, THE CELESTIAL MICROCOSM

Torajans believe that a house is not just a home, it's a small universe. Tongkonan, a wonder of architecture from the dawn of Toraja civilization, is far from a simple abode. The traditional house represents an intricate relation between generations. It serves a dutiful purpose to uphold peace and value in the society.

A Tongkonan belongs to To Ma'rapu, a family clan related by blood. Parengnge, an elder of such a clan is responsible to teach the extended family within his Tongkonan about the ancestral ways of life. A Tongkonan has its own set of family law and value, executed through Tarian Pitu or seven ethnic justice systems. The lack of writing culture doesn't seem to leave the legacy untold, since they are ingrained and passed through practice.

When you venture around Toraja, you'll notice that Tongkonan is always paired by rice storage called Alang. Alang symbolizes father that feeds his family, as opposed to Tongkonan's maternal role as caregiver. A larger Tongkonan is also supported by other elements such as watering hole, animal pen, family graves, and plantation which make the complex a small self-sufficient ecosystem. To build a Tongkonan, a family branch must carry out five stages of an intricate ceremony. Extended family members will have to work side by side to share high expenses and complicated requirements of those paramount ceremonies. After approved by a traditional council, the new glorious creation will then have its significant role amongst Torajan family tree.

CIRCLING BACK TO THE BEGINNING

No matter how far a Torajan travels, his/her life will always circle back to the Tongkonan. The moment of birth, the bonding of love, and the final resting place is and always will be in a Tongkonan building, where every other family members will join in on the festivities.

EMERGING AFFINITY

Tongkonan yields more than just shelter. As a very significant point in Toraja community, it grows into reference points which determine human relations. To express their relations with others, Torajans say that 'their houses are united' or that they are 'brothers and sisters' in a certain house, granting themselves a profound sense of belonging and reinforcing their clan system. The bond that links Torajan family is not merely one of blood, but of respect and affection in each other's life. Lively atmosphere can be genuinely encountered in a Tongkonan. Members of a clan oftentimes gather to discuss important affairs like marriages, heritages, or social conflicts, enabling themselves to resolve problems through intimate and amiable way.

RECOMMENDED PLACES TO DISCOVER THE SACRED HIGHLANDS

KE'TE KE'SU

From the sheer size of the village, the ancient Tongkonan buildings seem to loom over as sentinels of the Torajan lore itself. Even the stone stairs appear to be woven for giants to step upon. Ke'te Ke'su is one of the most pristine and traditional Tongkonan complexes throughout all Toraja, and it will capture your attention with each glance.

PALAWA'

Adorned with ornaments of sun circles and rooster carvings, Palawa' Tongkonan complex is a breathtaking sight. Fix your eyes on historical remnants of the ancestral war of the 11th century, with all the majestic buffalo horns proclaiming regality in every inch.

TUMAKKE' PAPA BATU

Tumakke' is home of the extraordinary Tongkonan, whose roof is exclusively made from andesite rock and soil mixture, giving it a solid sense of security found nowhere else. Sun, buffalo horns, plaiting, and geometrical patterns are artistically engraved to the Tongkonan of Tumakke'.

TORAJA ETHNIC

THE HISTORICAL WAY OF LIFE

Alongside their rich culture and traditions, Toraja also treasures abundant myths about the origin of its name. Buginese called the sacred highlands 'To Riaja' or a place where northern people lived.

The southerner's myth tells about Tamboro Langi' and Lakipada who descended from the sky with stairs. Tamboro Langi' established Sangalla' Kingdom and initiated contact with other kingdoms in South Sulawesi. Lakipada, on the other hand, is a theologian that preaches about the existence of afterlife (Puya). Lakipada's teaching continues to be the center of Toraja culture until present day. We can see the influences of his teaching in Rambu' Solo (burial) ceremony, Ma'nene (changing clothes of the deceased) ceremony, and the famed cliff or cave cemetery.

SERENE KINSHIP

In present day, Toraja people maintain their peaceful communal life. They have castes defining the social standards through their ancestral heraldry. When problems arise, they huddle up together and find the solution as an extensive family. Torajans love having guests, including tourists, probably because in the past guests are rare and visitors must have endured a tiring journey to reach the village. The common greeting when one walk past another man's house or visiting is "Manasumoraka" roughly translated as "have you cooked?" implying that there are no boundaries to be of concern between guests and the host. Simply stated, Torajans are friendly, humble, and welcoming to adventurers and explorers alike. So don't be afraid to greet them in your journey!

People of Luwu Kingdom had their own way of naming, referring it to 'To Rajang' or a place where the southerners lived. On the edge of the southern peninsula, people heard stories about a royal descendant known as Puang Lakipadada who came to Gowa Kingdom in 13th century to find eternal life. Gowanese called him 'Tau Raya' or the man from the east, thus the place was also known as 'Tana Tau Raya' (Tana means land, Tau means man, and Raya means east). Coming from various origins, the legends presumably lead to the name 'Toraja' as we know now.

Northern Torajans believe that their ancestors sailed from the north, almost certainly from China. The Northerners beliefs also mentioned the importance of women in Torajan culture. A long haired beautiful woman named Landorundun is told to be the personification of wealth and a daughter of Sa'dan noble is believed to be married with The Creator (Puang Matua) himself, allowing more procreation on earth. In contrast with northerners' myths revolved around life and fertility, Toraja southerners' myths center around war (Rari), characterized by sacrifice and death.

GRANDIOSE PARTING, CEREMONY OF DEATH

There is nowhere else on earth where the words death and lavish can be paired in a sentence as in Toraja. In this ethereally charming land, death has never borne sadness. On the contrary, it is the ultimate goal of life, longing to be celebrated by both the departed and the family members left behind. Cheers that echo through hilltops, a big feast for all guests, and traditional dances redefine what human perceive as morbid into something beautiful. The death ceremonies of Toraja, named Rambu Solo,' is the apotheosis of Torajan festival because of the sheer magnitude and cultural significance that follows.

TRANSCENDENT SACRIFICE

Rambu Solo' is a ceremony of the departed, where buffaloes are highly revered as a sacrificial entity playing an irreplaceable role in Torajan traditions. The more a Torajan individual is respected, the more buffaloes to sacrifice. Some even bear staggering numbers of hundreds, with a belief that with each buffaloes sacrificed, the departed will enter the afterlife (Puya) more easily. The meat of the sacrificed buffaloes are then shared with the guests attending as part of the revelry. It is a very extravagant and paramount celebration dating back to ancestral times, where buffaloes carefully and lovingly cared for give their meat back to the community that cherished them.

These ceremonies are events highly anticipated by locals and travelers alike, as they show the true hues of Torajan culture in its essence. Grand is not even a word fitting enough to describe the excitement and festivities going on as the Torajans always celebrate the parting in an extravagant feast.

Then comes the burial. Contrary to traditional norms, here, burial should not be hidden from the public eyes. Tombs are laid down through a specific construct: the higher the location, the nobler it is for family members. In each ceremony, children and descendants pay respect to their elderly departed.

Kalimbuang Borir

LO'KO' MATA

Stone burials are aplenty in Toraja, but Lokomata is the epitome of it all, as it is one hundred times bigger. This sheer size, coinciding with the colourful motives of the doors of the departed that filled every crevices creates a sense of amazement to everyone beholding its beauty.

KAMBIRA

Toraja people believe that babies died before they grew any teeth are pure and without sin. Therefore they need to be returned to the cradles of Mother Nature. A Tarra tree is chosen for its white sap resembling mother's milk, became a rampart as the baby is laid there without any covers. Over time, the baby will merge with the tree as one entity of the cosmos.

TAMPANG ALLO

Inside this magnificent cave of wonder, bones and skulls of departed commoners are neatly arranged. All display an architectural feat like nowhere else in the world. The noblemen, however, are placed inside coffins adorned with various carvings that depicted the progression of Toraja's use of tools — remnants of second generation Torajan that are highly revered.

LONDA

Be an archeological explorer for a day as you make your way through dark tunnels and small cracks to see a burial site unlike any other, guaranteed to satisfy the curiosity of your souls. As challenging as it is, Londa cave is a jaw-dropping feat that is astonishingly attractive.

BORIR

Big stone monuments erected since the megalithic era, or the menhirs, are still raised in Toraja as a part of the traditional practices embodying the land in its entirety. Borir, a village with the largest menhir field, will surely let you taste the air of the legendary saga flowing freely in the area.

LEMO

As one of the oldest burial cliffs in Toraja, every inch of Lemo radiates a sense of stillness that is indescribable by mere words. The remains of the deceased are laid here inside giant boulders with crevices, well preserved by the spirits of the land, keeping them intact and undamaged by Father of Time.

TORAJA NATURE

LAND ABOVE THE CLOUDS

Not only known for the culture and traditions of the death, Toraja also has a stunning natural charm. From the wonderful waterfalls, magnificent hills and its savanna, also the rice field that will be feast for the eyes. One of the most favorite new destinations in Toraja, namely Kampung Lolai, the Land above the Clouds. With the expanse of clouds like white cottons, will give you a sensation of being above the clouds. You can taste the pleasure of Toraja coffee at an altitude of 1,400 above sea level while enjoying the panoramic view of the sunrise. Staying at Tongkonan Lempe, will give you an unforgettable experience. The ride along the rough rocky road by motor cycles or small car for less than an hour will be paid with the charming beauty of Kampung Lolai. While waiting for the sun rise with white clouds so close to our feet will be an experience irreplaceable elsewhere. Rise early in the morning and come from Rantepao around 4:00AM. You can stay at Tongkonan Lempe Lolai with the tent or in Tongkonan to enjoy the morning mist at Lolai.

There are many places to visit while in Kampung Lolai besides Tongkonan Lempe. If you climb up a bit, you can enjoy the pleasure of a cup of warm Toraja coffee at a warung on top of Lolai. Tie your shoes and hike along the road that will lead you to an old fort called Tirotik. The trail will take you exploring the natural beauty of Toraja through the pine forest. Feel the morning breeze while portraying the warmth of the culture of Land above the Clouds. The 15-minute walk on the mild ground with the fragrance of pinecone pervaded the air would give you a stupendous feeling found nowhere else. For adventure junkie, an escapade to To'tombi will be a wish come true. Try paragliding and enjoy the bird's eye view of the city from the top, rice paddy fields and gorgeous Tongkonan stretch out below.

TORAJA COFFEE

Like any other valuable treasures, Toraja coffee sparked up feuds between noblemen in the past. “Coffee War” was an epic battle started when the Buginese tried to conquer Toraja in the 1890s, solely triggered by the highly valued coffee trade.

A taste that rioted the hearts of ancestors will definitely flare inspiration in everyone else with every sip. Indulge yourself in the quint essential of Toraja Arabica coffee. Sip it while fixing your sights on the breathtaking views as the heights of Toraja seemed to stand proud in perfect composition with its surroundings. With all its astounding qualities, no wonder Toraja coffee has the “Black Gold” stamped on its back.

The exceptional taste of Toraja coffee has been exalted by the Dutch noblemen and coffee enthusiasts. What makes the taste so invigorating is the complex algorithms embedded within the atmosphere of Toraja as a geographical standpoint, creating an environment that produces the perfect Arabica coffee.

The fact has landed Toraja coffee under the Geographical Indication Protection (GI) for its flavors so distinct that equals it to none in the world.

TORAJA HANDWOVEN

Every weave and profound stitching can be felt by everyone touching the handmade marvels of Torajan fabric. Displayed proudly in amalgamation with beautiful rice fields surrounding the premise, the clothes are essentially the pieces of souls of the ancestral spirits that still exist until today.

ARTISTRY

The artistic side of Toraja never ceased to exist. The magnificent carving shall leave you fascinated, as the beauty and the philosophy aesthetically collaborate, forming a sublime unity imprinted to their valuable Tongkonan. The base pattern of Toraja called Garonto’ Passura’ diverges into four patterns. The sun or Pa’ Barre Allo symbolizes that life is a bestowment from the divine. The rooster, or Pa’ Manuk Londong, emphasizes the Torajan’s norm, law, and leadership concept. The dragonfly motif or Pa’tedong characterizes prosperity in life, while the Pa’ Sussu pattern portrays democracy and wisdom as the foundations of society. Together they structure an exalted conception of Torajan ideal life.

TORAJA MARKETS

Pasar Bolu (Bolu Market) is where most money in Toraja rotates. Once every six days, small herders brought in with their trucks buffaloes, ranging from ordinary ones to the exquisite Tedong Bongas - or albino buffaloes - worth billions of Rupiah. Buyers wandering around in their sarongs, bringing huge chunks of cash in their hands since banks aren't very popular in Toraja.

Sometimes the two interact, inspecting prospective buffaloes in details since a slight defect on its eyes, jaws or body can reduce the price significantly. On the contrary, a desired trait like a spot of white in the right place or the shape of the horn will boost the price notably. Experience immersion with the traditions dating back to the birth of Torajan culture by visiting these unique venues.

BUFFALOES

In the mythical legends surrounding Toraja, buffaloes play an important role that is irreplaceable with those of other animals on the land. When loved ones departed into the afterlife, buffaloes are sacrificed in abundant numbers - from five to hundreds - and their horns adorn the Tongkonan building where family members are laid down for their final tribute.

“Tedong Saleko or Tedong Bonga” - or albino buffaloes are the coup de grace when it comes to sacred offerings. These white-speckled buffaloes are the prized livestock for the Torajans. Bundled at hundreds of million Rupiah, these creatures are worth checking out.

CULINARY HERITAGE

PA'PIONG

Pa'piong as the highlight of Torajan cuisine, not only eaten daily, but also used in many ceremonies as gift. This traditional dish usually use pork, chicken, fish, or buffalo meat grilled inside a bamboo. The meat is cooked with a mixture of spices such as grated coconut, scallions, lemon grass, pepper, garlic, and leaves of Miana. All the ingredients are mixed and wrapped into leaves of Miana, put into bamboo rod and cooked barbeque style on an open fire for an hour and a half, until the surface of the bamboo blackens or charred. A bamboo ranging to 10cm in length is enough for 8 - 10 packs of Pa'piong.

Chicken Pa'piong

Man with Ballo'

BALLO'

A glass of Ballo' can warm you up. Ballo' is a local beverage in a form of palm wine usually served in a bamboo tube. This home-made beverage contains a small amount of alcohol and is made from freshly tapped palm tree. Usually served in ceremonial event where all the family members are gathering. You can order Ballo' in local restaurant or try to find the Ballo' seller at the corner of Lapangan Bhakti at Rantepao.

Although this traditional drink is natural with small amount of alcohol, the strength may differ from one to another. It is thus advisable to take the right amount and not to over consume.

TAU TAU

The word Tau Tau means “like a person.” A Tau Tau is not the image of the departed, but rather portraying the departed’s soul who will continue its journey to the next life cycle. The effigy can reach up to 1.5m tall. It is usually well-dressed in traditional clothing completed with accessories and jewelry.

A specialist (Pande) Tau Tau manufactures the effigy based on the social status of the departed. There are 3 types of woods as a base, bamboo planks for the lowest social, the wood of Randu (Kapuk for local language) for the middle, and the wood of jackfruit (Nangka for local language) for the highest social status. Back in the old times, Pande Tau Tau usually stays near the house of the departed, while practicing some offerings during the manufacturing the effigy.

After the funeral ceremony which takes days to complete, the Tau Tau will be placed close to the grave, keeping the memory of the “Old” to live on.

Tau Tau at Lemo

Pa'gellu dancer

PA'GELLU

Pa'Gellu is a traditional dance that is performed to welcome the patriots or heroes who returned victoriously from the war. This dance is usually performed by teenage girls who follow the rhythmic beats of the drum played by four teenage boys. The dancers (Ma'toding in local language) wear traditional clothes in variety of colors and accessories made of gold and silver. They move their arms like a bird flapping in the air with their legs imitating and describing the flight over and down the valleys and hills which visualize the natural state of Toraja.

Nowadays, this dance has often performed at the ceremonies such as weddings, thanksgiving, harvest festival or welcoming the guest of honor to show excitement and express joy.

ETHEREAL JOURNEY

THINGS TO KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Row of Tau Tau at Londa

THE PERFECT TIMING

The peak of the tourist season in Toraja is June to August. Prepare your reservations well in advance if you plan to visit during this time. To avoid the crowd, visiting off-season is always an option worth considering. The best time in terms of tourist traffic and weather happens between April – June and September – October.

WEATHER CONDITION

Since Toraja is located in high ground, pleasant climate envelops it all-year around. Daily temperature varies from around 16°C in the evening and early morning to around 28°C during the day. This climate allows most hotels in Toraja to thrive without the use of air conditioners. As the other areas in Indonesia, Toraja too has only two seasons: wet and dry, with June to August as the driest months. The highest rainfall normally happens from September to March.

TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE

Toraja is in the UTC+8 time zone (known in Indonesia as WITA or Waktu Indonesia Tengah), the same as Western Australia, Kuala Lumpur, Singapore, Hong Kong, Bali and one hour ahead of Jakarta.

VISA REQUIREMENT

The visa requirement depends on the length of your stay and on your home country's regulations. Indonesian visa provision is prone to change. Before starting your journey, it is important to check the respective requirements at the Indonesian Embassy or Consulate Office in your home country.

MEANS OF TRADE

In Toraja, only Indonesian Rupiah (IDR) is accepted for cash payments. In general, transactions in Toraja are cash-based. Credit cards are not commonly used for payment, unless if you see Master or Visa logo on the cashier of hotels or restaurants. There are banks and ATMs in Makale and Rantepao where you can change your foreign currency into Rupiah or get your cash.

PACK LIGHT

Bring wash-and wear light cotton clothes, a light rain jacket with a hood, and a good sweater. Tennis shoes are fine for basic footwear, but if you plan to do outdoor activities (trekking or hiking) you will need sturdy shoes or boots. Bring one of your favorite hats to keep the sun off during long walks. Bring along some pre-packaged towelettes. These are handy for disinfecting your hands before eating or after a trip to the kamar kecil (lavatory).

GET READY FOR SPICE

Indonesians love adding spice to their food. The word "Pedas" (spice) must be one of the first things you learn to say in Indonesian as part of your culinary adventures. Depending on the region you are in, the spice might already be added to the food and in places like Sulawesi it is placed onto the side of the plate. If you can't handle spice make sure to learn to say "Tidak pedas" before ordering your food.

FRIENDLY LOCALS

Once you stay outside of the big cities in Indonesia, many locals may have never seen a foreigner before, so get ready for the stares. This is rarely intended in a malicious way, once you make eye contact with an Indonesian and smile they will often return the grin. Calls of "Hello sir or miss" are normal and many people are just trying to practice their English with you. Indonesians are so friendly and welcoming, if a little shy to start with, but if you need help with anything on your travels there will always be a crowd of people offering to help. Make sure you always use your right hand when greeting people, paying and eating.

DON'T WASTE YOUR VISIT, MAKE SURE YOU'RE LOST IN THE RIGHT PLACES

HIGHLAND COMPASS

In Toraja, you can always tell where north is by looking at the roof of Tongkonan. More visitors prefer to travel on foot and it is really recommended. This way, you'll get much more insights about life in Toraja that seem to elude the eyes of those on wheels. Don't hesitate to ask any locals about the direction to a site or location of ceremonies. Most of them are able to speak basic English and they're more than willing to help you.

STAYING WITH LOCALS IN VILLAGE

Keep in mind that people in many parts of Toraja may have limited experience with foreigners and are still learning how to share their homes with you. They do not routinely maintain guest rooms. Things like soft beds, cold drink and electricity are luxury items to some. You may even encounter with someone who barely speaks anything other than Bahasa Indonesia or the local language. They will offer you the best they have nonetheless, and you are expected to graciously return that with respectful treatment.

TOURIST INFORMATION SERVICE

The government Tourist Information Office is at Jl. A. Yani, Rantepao, open from 07.00AM - 01.00PM from Monday to Saturday. There are some private tourist information offices in Rantepao as well. Most can assist you to organize tours, car / motor bike rent and provide information.

TOUR GUIDES

Official licensed guides and freelance guides are available. Other than those provided by an agency, guide rates are usually negotiable. Be clear beforehand about who covers the guide's personal expenses and the cost of his return to home base. In most areas, tourist information services, hotels or accommodation staffs can recommend a guide for you.

SHOPPING

Toraja offers many beautiful things for you to bring home: wooden sculptures called tau-tau, handwoven clothes, wooden carving picturing wonderful Torajan symbols, coffee and many more. Be extremely cautious however, when buying antiques or work of arts on display especially in tourist areas. Most are reproductions though they may look incredibly similar. Price in Toraja is a flexible thing. Bargaining is advised.

AT THE FUNERAL CEREMONY

Visiting Toraja won't be complete if you haven't attended

Rice Barn of Tongkonan at Palawa

and observed their unique funeral ceremony. Wearing black clothes is advisable when attending the ceremony, a shirt covering the shoulders, and a lower body garment covering until the knees. A man could put up a sarong and a woman could put up stole or shawl. Ask a permission before taking a photograph or video.

HOW TO GET THERE?

Makassar is the nearest international hub to Toraja. With international standard airport, Sultan Hasanuddin International Airport, Makassar serves major domestic and international airlines from main cities in Indonesia and South East Asia.

It takes 7-8-hour drive to reach Toraja from Makassar, but it won't be a problem since convenient buses are available to take you there. Take the journey to the magnificent highlands in the morning or night.

After arrival at Sultan Hasanuddin International Airport, take a taxi to bus representative offices located nearby. The morning bus leaves daily from Makassar / Toraja at 08.30 AM and arrives at Toraja / Makassar in the afternoon. For adventurers who prefer to travel underneath the pale moonlight of the tropics, you can take the daily evening bus departing to Makassar / Toraja at 21.00 PM, arriving at Toraja/ Makassar the next morning at 05.30 AM.

Makale is the entrance to Toraja. You can get off the bus either in Makale or Rantepao. It usually depends on which area of hotel / accommodation you'll be staying. The capital tourism city for Toraja is Rantepao that provides visitors with choices of hotels, restaurants and shops.

To travel faster, there are flights serving 6 days a week, Mondays to Saturdays (off on Sundays), especially tailored for those with finite staying time. The airplane leaves at 09.30 AM from Sultan Hasanuddin International Airport. Within 45 minutes you will arrive directly in Toraja in Pongtiku Airport, about 15-min drive to Makale and 45-min drive to Rantepao. The airplane will fly back within same day to Makassar at 11.00 AM.

MEANS OF TRAVERSE

If you want to wander anyway, there are several options to take since the public transportation only runs on certain route of town.

Pete – pete / Bemo / Angkot is the inner city transportation and travel (intercity transportation between Makale and Rantepao vv.) are the easiest modes of public transportation. Operating from 06.30am till 18.00pm daily, sometimes stopping earlier and running less frequently in remoter area. There are 2 main bus terminal in Toraja, Makale for Tana Toraja and Pasar Bolu for Toraja Utara. The rate starts from US$ 1.00 per way per person.

Chartered vehicles such as minivan (called Kijang or Avanza) can be booked at hotels or from car rent services available in Makale and Rantepao.

Toraja's remoteness and beauties are usually hard to reach as the access can have narrow and extremely bumpy roads. Those craving for more adventure can rent a motorbike to explore the remote areas and villages of the highlands. Tourist offices, and some hotels usually serves motorbike rent at Rp 70,000 per day.

Entering Makassar and then transfer directly to Sultan Hasanuddin International Airport.

I USE THIS BECAUSE I CARE

PLASTIC REDUCTION INITIATIVE

This initiative aims to encourage operators in the tourism industry, local residents and tourists to participate in reducing the amount of plastic waste produced in Toraja. One way we will do this is by promoting the use of refillable water bottles and reusable shopping bags.

WHY PLASTIC

Tourism in Toraja is rapidly growing and with it is increasing the amount of plastic waste. It is estimated that every year tourists use more than 2.500.000 plastic water bottles during their stay. As a tourist you can help reduce this plastic waste and protect the beauty of Toraja.

HOW TO PARTICIPATE

- Use Refillable Bottles
Look for businesses marked with this sticker
They have water refill stations
- Use Reusable Shopping Bags

HOW THIS HELPS

- Reduces the amount of plastic waste
- Creates demand for alternatives to plastic

SMALL CHANGES MAKE A BIG DIFFERENCE!

COMMUNITY BASED TOURISM (CBT)

Sesean Suloara is located in Toraja Utara about an hour drive from Rantepao upwards of Batutumonga. It is a CBT village where you can enjoy while visiting Toraja. The Manganda dancer dressing up in classical Toraja costume will welcome you in enchanting moves. Watch also the other traditional art performances in Sanggar Tari Suloara while you're there. Walking to Pana' and Lo'ko Mata, you'll find the oldest gravesite in Toraja Utara with many large rocks and picturesque rice terraces. Take your time to learn more about the culture of Torajan you can experience in this CBT.

Enjoy Toraja by standing at its highest peak in Mount Sesean. Visitors can hike up to reach the top at about 2,100 meters above sea level. Trek with a local guide or by yourself. Hiking treks are available and take about 4-5 hours to reach the stunning view of the Toraja waiting to reward you. The local community members of Sesean Suloara are now introducing the initiative of Bring Back Your Waste as a way to keep the environment clean. At the gate, you will need to pay entrance fee to Sesean Peak in return of a recycle bag for you to bring your waste back to the entrance gate. A small action to support a sustainable tourism.

WORDS THAT GET YOU (ALMOST) ANYWHERE IN TORAJA OR INDONESIA

There are so many amazing places to visit in Indonesia, so do not limit yourself from experiencing it. People in Indonesia, especially those who work in travel & tourism industry do speak English. Try to learn some local (Indonesian) language that would allow you to understand and appreciate cultural references and nuances. In the end, you will cross the boundaries of communication between the local people and you will go deeper within their culture.
